

Ivan Matviak has more than 25 years of experience transforming complex global businesses through disciplined strategy, product innovation, operations optimization, and cross-silo collaboration.

Currently, Matviak is an executive vice president at Clearwater Analytics, a publicly traded fintech company. He worked as a senior advisor to Boston Consulting Group and the private equity firm Warburg Pincus LLC. Matviak was previously an executive vice president at State Street Bank, serving as chairman and president of multiple fintech subsidiaries and head of Americas for the bank's data and analytics business.

Earlier in his career, Matviak worked in Edinburgh, Johannesburg, London, New York, and Paris at the Bank of Scotland, Bain & Company, Walt Disney Company, and Procter & Gamble. Over his career, Matviak launched and led multiple global businesses in consumer products, technology, and finance. Presently, Matviak is a board member for Boston Partners in Education and Historic Newton.

Matviak has co-authored several publications on collaboration and professional service firm strategy. He co-founded Gardner & Co., and co-developed its suite of technology-based collaboration tools including the Smart Collaboration Accelerator.

Matviak holds an MA from the University of Pennsylvania, an MBA and master's degree in international affairs from the Wharton Business School, and is a fellow at the Joseph H. Lauder Institute for International Studies.